Our 5-day expedition will take us into the wild, deep southeast corner of Lutruwita-Tasmania on a transformational journey of learning and discovery as local marine biology experts share their stories about Tasmania's Giant Kelp.

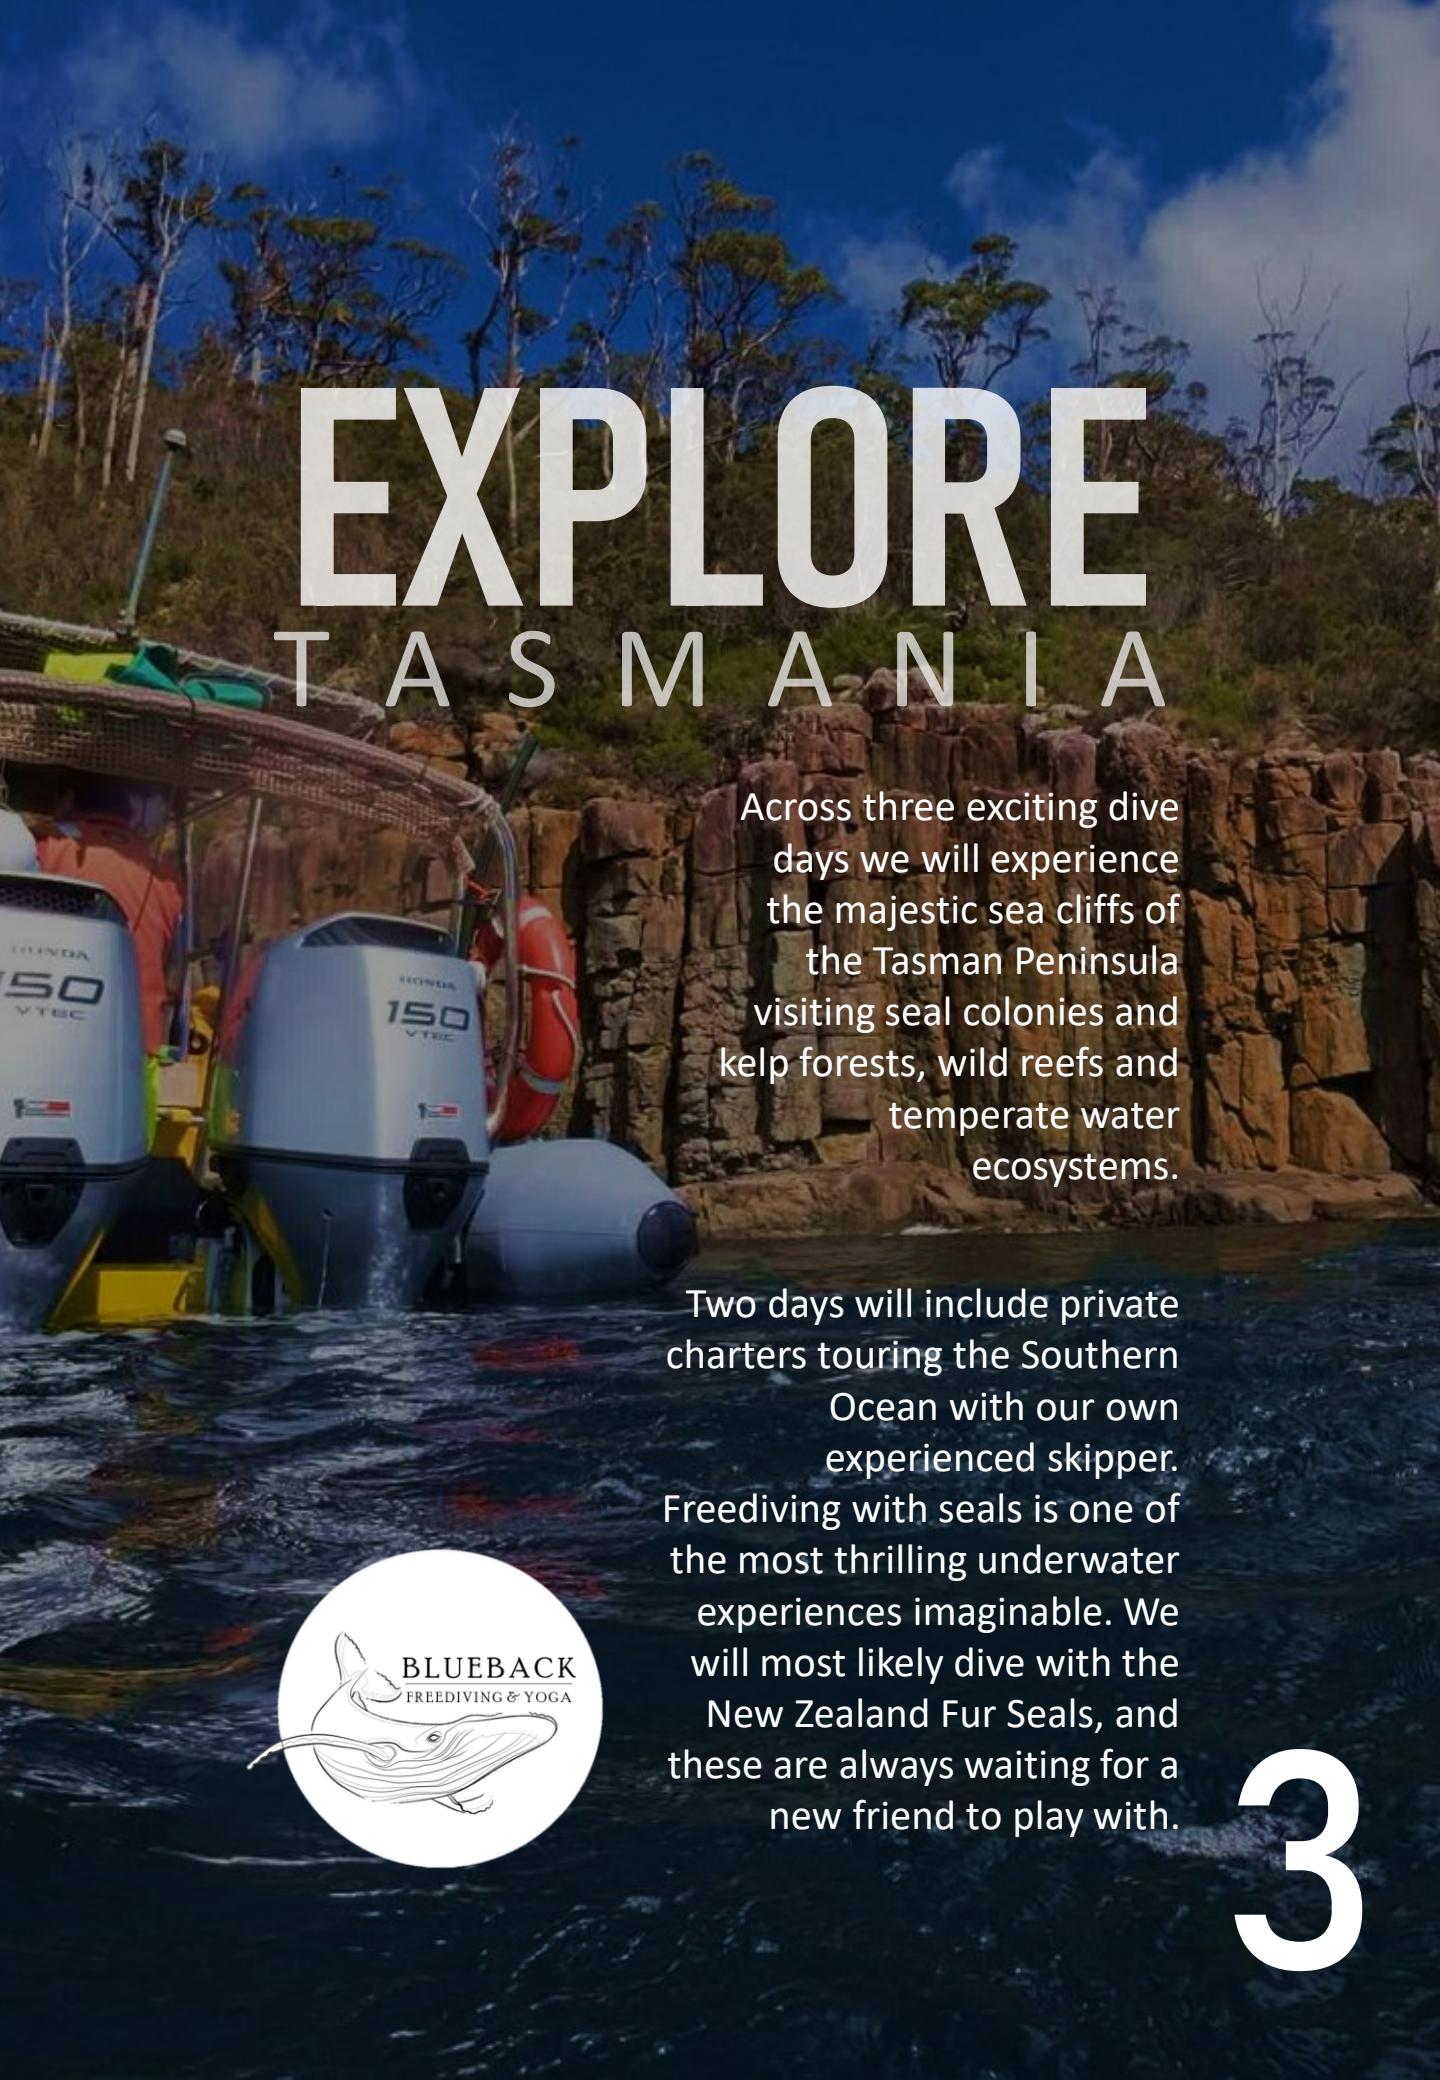

Our retreat includes a deeper mission to lend support to a giant kelp restoration project, combining the efforts of scientific divers from the Institute of Marine & Antarctic Science, the Tasmanian Commercial Divers Association and recreational freedivers and scuba divers assisting the team at Eaglehawk Dive Centre.

Together we will visit multiple sites around the Tasmanian Peninsula that have been planted and take part in restoring balance by removing invasive sea urchins from planting sites.

EXPLORE

TASMANIA

Across three exciting dive days we will experience the majestic sea cliffs of the Tasman Peninsula visiting seal colonies and kelp forests, wild reefs and temperate water ecosystems.

Two days will include private charters touring the Southern Ocean with our own experienced skipper.

Freediving with seals is one of the most thrilling underwater experiences imaginable. We will most likely dive with the New Zealand Fur Seals, and these are always waiting for a new friend to play with.

Southeast Tasmania is a global hotspot for unique, temperate marine life, characterized by high levels of endemism (species found nowhere else on Earth).

The region is known for its dramatic underwater kelp forests, sponge gardens, and specialized species that have evolved to survive in cold-water environments.
